Title: DANIEL ELLSBERG

Character: ELECTRONIC SURVEILLANCE

Synopsis:

[REDACTED] <sup>Calif</sup> advised that in the latter part of July 1973, he was employed as a sound man for Warner Brothers Studio and they were filming some scenes for the movie "The Terminal Man" in an apartment at the Bunker Hill Towers in Los Angeles. On the first day he discovered a duplex wall outlet in the bedroom, which had a common wall with the living room. He found the upper outlet did not work, but the bottom outlet was operative. He thought it strange at the time because he stated these outlets are connected in parallel and when one is functioning the other should function, conversely when one is inoperative, the other is inoperative. The next day he heard that the previous occupant of this apartment was DANIEL ELLSBERG. Upon hearing this his suspicions were aroused and he returned to the above electrical outlet, removed the face plate, and found a very strange looking outlet. He did not take the outlet apart, but returned it to the wall. He suspected that the upper portion of the outlet contained a hidden microphone. He did not see a microphone. The records of the Bunker Hill Towers reflected that DANIEL ELLSBERG occupied Apartment 1505 from 12/1/72 to 6/19/73. These records reflected that this apartment was rented to Warner Brothers from 7/21/73 to 7/31/73. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Bunker Hill Towers, was shown a drawing of the electrical outlet which was furnished by [REDACTED]. He stated that this type of outlet was not in use at the Bunker Hill Towers and added he had never seen an outlet like it.

She advised the management she wanted to rent the apartment when it was available and moved into the apartment in September, 1973. She had all the interior walls removed. At the time, there were no interior walls in the apartment. He checked all logical areas for microphones and found none. He metered the AC line on electrical plugs located in a counter in the apartment and noted a variation from 115 to 119 volts on the positive side, when measured above 60 cycles. This "piqued" his curiosity. However, he was never able to locate the source of the variation nor could he reduce it to an intelligent signal. He said there could be many reasons, only one of which would be a microphone. He viewed the drawing made by [REDACTED] of the device [REDACTED] observed in the bedroom wall of room 1505. He said this depicted a current carrier transmitter which could contain a microphone. He said it could only operate if it had access to AC lines. On 11/18/74, [REDACTED] Los Angeles, advised he removed the interior walls in apartment 1505, Bunker Hill Towers, and personally removed the electrical outlets. He stated they were normal electrical outlets and advised he had never seen a device as depicted by [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] advised that he conducted an electronic sweep of Apartment 1505, Bunker Hill Towers, Los Angeles, California, in September 1973, for [REDACTED]. He stated that there were no interior walls in the apartment at the time he conducted the sweep. He said he checked all electrical outlets, the telephone, and any other area that might logically contain a microphone and found none. He stated there was a counter which partially separated the kitchen from the rest of the apartment. At either end of the counter there were new electrical plugs. When he metered the AC line on the plugs at the above counter he noted a variation from 115 to 119 volts, on the positive side, when he measured it above 60 cycles. In view of the object of his search this "piqued" his curiosity. He stated, however, he was never able to locate the source of this variation nor could he reduce the variation to an intelligent signal. He stated that there could be many reasons for this variation, only one of which would be a microphone.

The drawing furnished by [REDACTED] of the device he observed in the bedroom wall of Apartment 1505 was shown to [REDACTED]. He stated that this depicted a current carrier transmitter which could contain a microphone. He stated it could operate on low frequency and was a low powered device. He stated that it could only operate if it had access to AC lines. He advised that the monitoring would have to be in that building. He was told that the person who observed it stated that the top plug was not functioning. He termed it a "schlock operation".

[REDACTED] he has been engaged in electronic surveillance operations and their detection for 25 years as [REDACTED]. He is currently retired and working [REDACTED] on a contract basis.

Deputy Special Prosecutor
Watergate Special Prosecution Force

SUBJECT: Daniel Ellsberg

Reference is made to your memorandum to this office of September 16, 1974, captioned "Daniel Ellsberg." [REDACTED] should be interviewed to determine the identity of the "sound man" who allegedly observed a "listening device" in the Los Angeles apartment previously occupied by the Ellsberg defense team. Since [REDACTED] is a member of the news media, it is suggested the AUSA Nobles, to whom [REDACTED] supplied this information, be requested to contact [REDACTED] in order to insure his willingness to provide further information to the FBI.

If identified, the "sound man" referred to by [REDACTED] should be interviewed to determine any further information with regard to the precise nature of the alleged "listening device," as well as the location of the apartment in which this device was observed. The Bureau should also determine if the "Ellsberg defense team" did in fact occupy that apartment. If the basic facts alleged by [REDACTED] are confirmed by the Bureau's investigation the Bureau should proceed to attempt to locate the "alleged" listening device, and/or any evidence that such a device had been in place. Also, the Bureau should seek to determine any possibility that a "listening post" was set up within the vicinity of the apartment.

On October 24, 1974, Special Agent [REDACTED] contacted Assistant Special Prosecutor Frank Martin of this Office concerning this investigation. At that time Mr. Martin advised S.A. [REDACTED] to hold in abeyance any interview of [REDACTED] and the present occupant of the apartment previously occupied by Mr. Ellsberg. The Bureau should interview [REDACTED] and continue to follow all logical leads in this investigation.

At present there is no evidence that White House personnel or presidential appointees were involved in this matter. Accordingly, it is unclear whether or not the Special Prosecutor's Office will have jurisdiction over this matter. It is, therefore, requested that reports on this investigation also be provided to the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division for his information.
